

Disability Insurance

Helps protect your income

It's important to be financially prepared for the future. That's why you have insurance for your house, your car and your health. But do you have insurance for the thing you use to pay for these expenses — your income?

If an accident or sickness prevented you from earning an income, how would you pay for your everyday expenses?

Our disability insurance helps protect your way of life by providing a benefit for a covered disability. It's a smart way to prepare for the unexpected.

How disability insurance helps people

Many people make plans for their income and savings. Yet when they least expect it, some of them will have an accident or sickness that can change their plans dramatically. Here are a few stories:

BENEFIT STORIES

ARIA

Aria is a recent college grad in her first full-time job. She injured her leg jogging after work one evening. Her doctor advised her to stay off her leg for three weeks. After using paid time off for a week, Aria stopped receiving a paycheck.

How her disability policy helped:

Aria used her disability benefits to help with her rent and monthly student loan payment.

MIA AND ALEX

After having a baby, Mia took maternity leave. The couple worried about how they'd pay for everyday expenses without her income. Fortunately, Mia purchased a disability policy through work two years ago.

How her disability policy helped:

Mia's benefits helped the couple pay for their growing family's ongoing expenses, and they didn't have to use any of the money they'd been saving for a bigger house.

WILLIAM

Six months before his daughter's wedding, William suffered an unexpected heart attack and had to have surgery. He needed to take time off from work to recover, but the bills still needed to be paid.

How his disability policy helped:

How disability insurance works

If you can't work because of a sickness or injury, you might use savings to help cover ongoing monthly expenses. But would you have enough? Disability insurance can help replace missing income so you can focus on what's most important — recovery.

- At enrollment, you can choose to elect a disability benefit that best meets your needs (subject to maximums).
- If you can't work because of a covered sickness or injury, a benefit is payable in regular payments after the elimination period (if applicable).
- Benefits are payable directly to you, and you can use them however you'd like.
- Disability benefits may also be available if you return to work part-time.

COMMON CONDITIONS THAT MAY PREVENT AN EMPLOYEE FROM WORKING

- Pregnancy and childbirth
- Cancer
- Heart attacks and strokes
- Back and joint disorders
- Accidents and fractures
